

Handout 3 – assignments

In the course of this proseminar, you are supposed to submit three assignments. They will all be assessed individually and are part of your final mark.

Assignment 1: Reading test

For assignment 1, you are supposed to read a real academic research paper. We will discuss this paper in class, then you will be quizzed on this text by means of a short Moodle test about the paper's structure and contents.

Assignment 2: Research report

You will write up a small-scale applied linguistics research project as a report and submit it via Moodle. It needs to be written up in a special MS WORD template (s. Moodle) in 750 words \pm 10%.

Assignment 3: Project talks

Towards the end of the course, you will present the current state of your research project (method, items, preliminary findings etc.) in a brief talk with the instructor. For this talk you will prepare and bring a one-page handout, printed out only! Your talk will be formally assessed according to content, language use, and presentation (s. Moodle).

You can always come and see the instructor in the office hours or via Zoom and discuss these three assignments and progress in your research project individually.
